A Wedding in Wyoming.

Camping near town, we secured our stock and then went in. Entering the leading store, I introduced myself to Mr. Stiles, one of the proprietors and the postmaster.

"It's now half-past two, and at three there's a wedding at Jonas Burton's. Old Jonas is a rough old coon that we elected a justice of the peace about a month ago, and, as this will be his first attempt at a marriage, I think we will see some fun. Come go with me."

We went in the old squire's cabin and found him poring over a large volume of the statutes of Wyoming, sweating like a horse and looking terribly anxious. After greeting us, he said: "Stiles, then galoots that got up these yer laws hadn't gumption enough to last 'em over night. I've run through the blamed book a half dozen times, an' can't find a word about matrimony or how the hitchin' process is proceeded with. I've just got to put the clamps on this couple hit or miss, an' if I don't yoke 'em up legal I can't help it."

Stiles explained to him about how to proceed, and the old man finally thought he could worry through in tolerable shape. Ere long the couple appeared, followed by a crowd of the citizens of the camp. The candidates stood up before the squire, who began:

"Fellar-citizens, this 'yar man an' this 'yar woman have appeared before the court to be hitched in the legal hands of wedlock. If any galoot in the mob knows of anything that mout block the game of tuck to a higher court, let him now toot his bazoo, or else keep his jaw to himself now and forever more. All in favor 'o me peecedin' as authorized by law, say 'I.' Everybody said 'I.'"

Contrary, 'no. Nobody said 'no.' "The motion's carried unanimously, an' the court rules that their hain't nuthin to prevent the tryin' of the case. Grip yer fins."

The candidates joined hands. "Amos Peabody, do you solemnly swa'r that ye'll freeze to Mandy forever an' pervide fur 'er, an' treat her squar an' white, accordin' to the rules an' regulations sot down to govern such cases in the laws o' the United States, so help yer God?" "Yass, sir; I do, sir."

"That fixes yer end o' the bargain. Mandy Thomas, do you solemnly swa'r that ye'll hang on to Amos for all comin' time, that ye'll nuss him in sickness, and be squar to him in wellness, that ye'll always be to him a good, true, honest up-an'-up wife under the penalties prescribed by the laws for the punishment of such offenders; so you swa'r this, so help yer God?" "I swa'r I will."

"Then by the power in me vested as justice o' the peace in an' fur this precinct, I pronounce Amos Peabody, husband, an' you Mandy Thomas, wife, and legalize ye to remain as such now an' forevermore, an' ye'll stand committed till the fees an' costs in the case are paid in full an' may God have mercy on your soul an' bless this union with his bestest blessin'."

The fees and costs were adjusted, and the newly made husband and wife, after receiving the congratulations of the assembly, departed for their cabin up the creek.—Oil City Derrick.

A System of instruction for working-people has been organized with great success in Copenhagen. At a public meeting held in the Autumn, the number of workmen desirous of attending the classes was found to be upwards of 3,000. There are at present 136 classes, with 132 teachers, dispersed over the town in seventeen different houses. There are fifteen classes of these, comprising about 200 students, for the most part under female teachers. The women are taught hygiene and the chemistry of housekeeping, besides the elementary sciences and languages, some of the male pupils have asked for instruction in bookkeeping, and the elements of law; others, for help toward their own special employment. The painters want to get information about the chemistry of colors; the smiths, about metallurgy. Men who work by night have been formed into classes. The bakers get their instruction early in the evening; and the men at the gasworks, who work by day and night in turn, get their instruction during one month with the rest of the students in the evening, and during the next month have special classes in the daytime. The whole undertaking has roused an interest among the working-people which, based upon an increasing and more consciously recognized desire for knowledge, promises good results for the whole society, if directed rightly. It has been considered best to let the plan grow according to the wants and desires of the laboring classes, instead of obtruding any completely arranged plan upon them and this way of proceeding has evidently met with their approval.

The argument of Baron Tennyson's verses on the marriage of the Princess Beatrice consists of an elaborate and sustained metaphor which we take the liberty to translate into perspicuous prose: Life is a day lighted by two suns. One sun is maternal, the other spousal love. One of the suns of the Princess Beatrice's life is Queen Victoria, while the rival luminary is Battenberg. Under ordinary circumstances, the German gentleman would have the pull, but in this case her Majesty is the heavier body. The Princess Beatrice will not "quit the widowed crown," but will continue to revolve in the "household orbit." The attraction of the second sun will not prevail against the superior gravity of his mother-in-law; and the Princess, drawn two ways at once, will hang in mid-heaven "like some conjectured planet," without any definite astronomical purpose, but favored with a double quantity of caloric and constant summer.—New York Sun.

The Mormons are seeking out all the remote places of the earth in order to spread the doctrine of the Latter-Day Saints. One of their peripatetic elders recently found a congenial field in New Zealand among the Maoris. He found a native chief who had had a vision of the coming of the new religion, and in a short time he secured 127 converts among the ex-cannibals. It is an open question whether the Maoris will gain anything by this change in their religion. Civilization has cut off more than half their number; perhaps they hope to recoup this loss by the productive creed of Joseph Smith.
